

Leave Safely

Most of those caught in the canyon, and who wanted to leave, were out safely by early evening.

A number of youngsters missed buses to return from ski schools at the canyon resorts and were stranded even after the road was opened. The Salt Lake County Jeep Patrol provided transportation for them to the patrol's headquarters, 4600-9th East, where parents were able to pick them up.

In early evening, a light rain began falling in the Salt Lake Valley, with light snow reported at higher mountain areas.

No new slides occurred in Little Cottonwood Canyon on the road to Alta, and there were no slides reported in Logan Canyon, although the danger of possible slides remained.

The Sunday forecast for most of the Intermountain Area calls for a chance of light snow in the northern part of the re-